The Capstone Experience: English majors will designate one 400-level course as their capstone. Most eligible courses are cross-listed with a graduate-level seminar (for example, English 455/5556); the alternative is English 499, Senior Tutorial, for which students need permission from the instructor. Please see the English department course descriptions for more information about each semester’s possible capstone courses.

In order to receive capstone credit, students must submit a signed capstone contract to the Undergraduate Director within the first three weeks of the capstone semester, and must provide two copies of the final project for the course (the capstone project) at the end of the semester.

Please approach the capstone project as the culmination of your study as an English major, and use it to reflect the best work you are capable of. Consult with the instructor of your capstone course to determine the format and content of your capstone project, and keep in mind the Student Learning Outcomes that have been identified for your major track, which are the basis of the rubric by which your capstone project will be assessed.
